Message: Hello, Lynda,

I have written before but I write again after reading the article about redistricting in today's paper. If all the areas slated to be merged in the new redistricting plan are against the idea, but supervisors from other districts insist on merging them anyway, despite geographical and myriad other differences, isn't that gerrymandering? If not, what is?

Rohnert Park's needs and priorities have nothing to do with those of the Coast and West County. I believe Rohnert Park voters will vote to develop the coast so they won't have to build low income, high density housing. I think Rohnert Park voters will out-vote West County voters with their greater population and our needs will not be met. I think this is a terrible idea.
